

490 million dollars of buildings, how much construction, how much activity over a prolonged period of time to build 490 million dollars worth of buildings; to install 800 million dollars worth of equipment. And what eminent domain does in this particular case, we all know that this project cannot stand the delays, some people would say the inordinate delays of going through the court system. All eminent domain does in this case is tell the one holdout property owner, you must be reasonable, you can demand a high, fair, reasonable price, but you cannot demand an unfair, unreasonable price, and for your greedy, unfair, selfish, personal gain hold all this benefit back from the people. I urge the defeat of the Wickersham amendment. Thank you.

PRESIDENT ROBAK: Thank you, Senator Brashear. Senator Hall.

SENATOR HALL: Thank you, Madam President, members. Senator Brashear, my, my, if I had a fan I'd cool myself off. You talk about eminent domain as if it is something that we should all look forward to. Like when you go to the hospital and they tell you, well, you've got to have an operation tomorrow, and oh, we're going to wake you up at six o'clock and you're going to get the enema. I mean, that's really what we're talking about here in terms of eminent domain. You're talking about people who have no ability to protect their property, real and personal. I mean that's what the bill says. I mean, the court case that's on point, no matter how old it is, is the law of the state, period. Even I know that. We're talking about whether or not the folks who sit on the court are going to somehow, because they weren't there in 1967, be a slick, new version of the Supreme Court. Well, I can tell you I have personal experience, and I don't think...as a matter of fact, I think they've gone backwards, Senator Brashear, some the experiences I've had with them in terms of the way they deal with issues. But if you would respond to a question or six.

PRESIDENT ROBAK: Senator Brashear.

SENATOR HALL: Senator Brashear, are you...

SENATOR BRASHEAR: Yes, Senator Hall.

SENATOR HALL: Thank you. You talked about 1.3 billion dollars of capital investment, correct?
